ADOLESCENCE

In youth's embrace, a journey unfolds,
Adolescence whispers tales untold.
A dance with dreams, where hearts ignite,
Navigating the maze of growing light.

Awakening passions, a vibrant bloom,
Uncertain paths, yet banishing gloom.
The canvas of life, in hues so bright,
Adolescence paints its own twilight.

Chasing echoes of laughter and tears,
Facing fears that shape the coming years.
In this fleeting chapter, bold and free,
Adolescence, a symphony in glee.

Struggling wings, eager to soar,
Chasing horizons, forevermore.
In this fleeting moment, life's sweet chance,
Adolescence whispers, a timeless dance.

FRIENDSHIP

Friendship is one of the greatest bonds anyone can ever wish for. Lucky are those who have friends they can trust. Friendship is a devoted relationship between two individuals who both feel immense care and love for each other. Usually, a friendship is shared by two people who have similar interests and feelings. You meet many along the way of life, but only some stay with you forever. Those are your real friends who stay by your side through thick and thin. Friendship is the most beautiful gift you can present to anyone. It is one that stays with a person forever. A person is acquainted with many people in their life. However, the closest once became our friends. You may have a large friend circle in school or college, but you know you can only count one or two people with whom you share true friendship. There are essentially two types of friends, one is good friends and true friends, or best friends. They are the ones with whom we have a special bond of love and affection; in other words, having true friends makes our lives full of happiness .most importantly, true friendship stands for a relationship free of any judgment. In a true friendship, a person can be themselves completely without the fear of being judged.

IT WAS YOU.... !

The day of gathering
Again it came
As a semi colon
Wiping out you
From my line of sight

The silent mode wisperings
And series of hard knocks
Tampered my world of
Eternal dreams

My day on the wheels
Surfed the faces on the way
And the bitterly truth
It was not you....!

Minutes passed the hours
The tenure expires
Me on the point of turn
To my silence of solitude

There thee nymph appeared
Like a drizzling spark
Royally Adored
Intimate and Dearmost Angel
It was You.....!

SPORTS

Many sports have been played in India since ancient times, and hockey has been declared the national game of India. Especially children are very fond of playing games in the playground in the nearby areas of their homes, or they generally participate in school. Many school level, district level, state level, national level, and international level sports activities are organized for the maximum participation of the children and youths of the country. However, sometimes disappointing performances of Indian athletes at the national or international level, like the Olympics or common wealth games, show the poor condition of sports and facilities provided to the athletes in India.

Even so, Indian sportsmen have yet to reach a benchmark in international sports; however, it seems that soon they will, as the criteria and scope of sports have increased in the current years. It has been promoted to a great extent in schools and colleges by the government of the country. Indian athletes are showing their full participation in every national and international level sport and continuously trying to achieve the quality and standard. Given that Indian athletes only earned a small number of gold medals at the most recent Olympics, they played with full courage and enthusiasm. India is leading in many sports like hockey, wrestling, cricket, etc.

The selection of the best sportsperson is done by the students playing well at the school or state level. Now the condition of sports in India has changed, and it has become a good field to gain popularity and success. It is not separate from education, and it is not necessary that if one is playing good sports, he does not need a good education, or if one is going well in education, he should not be involved in sports. Education and sports are two sides of the same coin, which means success. Playing sports in the schools by the students has been made compulsory; teachers and parents should promote the children on their own level to play the game for their growth and development as well as the future of the country.

Sports nourish our lives in many ways. It teaches us discipline and continuity in our work to get to the goal. It keeps us fit both physically and mentally, and thus socially, emotionally, psychologically, and intellectually. Likewise, it is the best way to entertain and meditate the mind in such a polluted and pressurized environment where everyone becomes ready to create tension and create problems for others. It enhances the concentration level and memory power and fills the mind with positive thoughts.

OCEAN

In the ocean's embrace, where blue skies meet,
Tides dance and seagulls greet.
A world of wonder, vast and grand,
Where azure waves kiss the golden sand.

Beneath the surface, a hidden realm,
Coral gardens, a colorful helm.
Fish of every hue and size,
Dart and shimmer, a mesmerizing prize.

The ocean's depths, a mystery untold,
Where shipwrecks and treasures of old,
Await discovery, a fortune's gleam,
In the ocean's embrace, a wondrous dream.

Its currents flow, like veins so wide,
Connecting lands, side by side.
A lifeline for all, a highway of life,
The ocean's rhythm, a soothing strife.

But human actions, a somber truth,
Scar the ocean's beauty, its delicate ruth.
Pollution and waste, a tragic sight,
Threaten its balance, its sacred might.

Yet hope remains, a beacon so bright,
To mend what's been harmed, to restore its light.
Reduce our footprint, tread with care,
Protect the ocean, a treasure so rare.

In its vastness, we find solace and peace,
A reminder of our interconnected lease.
Its rhythm, a heartbeat, a lullaby,
The ocean's song, an eternal cry.

So let us honor this majestic domain,
Preserve its wonders, its beauty maintain.
For generations to come, let it thrive,
The ocean, a gift, a treasure to survive.

NEPAL'S CHILD GODDESS, 'KUMARI'

Nepal is a land of diverse cultures and traditions, and one of the most enigmatic traditions is that of the Kumari, the living goddess. The Kumari is a young girl who is chosen to be worshipped as the living reincarnation of the Hindu goddess Taleju. The tradition of worshipping the Kumari has a long history and plays a significant role in the religious and cultural life of Nepal.

The Historical Context of Nepal's Child Goddess, 'Kumari'

The tradition of the Kumari can be traced back to ancient Nepal, with its origins dating to the 17th century. According to historical records, the first Kumari was established by the Malla dynasty in the Kathmandu Valley. It is said that King Jaya Prakash Malla was once meditating in his palace when the goddess Taleju came to him in the form of a young girl and requested that he visit her at the Swayambhunath Stupa. The king accepted her invitation, and from that day onwards, the Kumari was regarded as the living goddess. Since then, the Kumari has been an important part of Nepal's cultural and religious landscape.

The Kumari tradition is deeply rooted in the beliefs of the Newar community, an indigenous group in the Kathmandu Valley. For the Newars, the Kumari is a symbol of purity and power, and her presence is believed to bring prosperity and protection to the community. The selection process for the Kumari is rigorous and involves a series of religious and supernatural rituals. The chosen girl is usually from the Shakya or Bajracharya caste, and she must meet strict criteria, including having unblemished skin, black hair, and no signs of fear. Once selected, the Kumari resides in the Kumari Ghar, a palace in Kathmandu, and her feet are not allowed to touch the ground until she is retired from her role.

Key Figures and Impact of Nepal's Child Goddess, 'Kumari'

The Kumari holds a revered position in Nepalese society, and her influence extends beyond religious and cultural realms. She is considered a manifestation of the divine feminine energy, and her blessings are sought by people from all walks of life. The Kumari is highly sought after during religious festivals and ceremonies, where her presence is believed to bring good fortune and blessings to the participants. As a result, the Kumari is a central figure in the religious and social life of Nepal, and her role is crucial in upholding traditional beliefs and practices.

However, the impact of the Kumari tradition is not without controversy and criticism. Critics argue that the practice of worshipping a young girl as a living goddess is outdated and violates the rights of the child. They point out that the rigorous selection process and the seclusion of the Kumari from normal life can have detrimental effects on her physical and mental well-being. Additionally, concerns have been raised about the exploitation of Kumari for commercial purposes, as her appearances at public events and tourist attractions generate income for certain individuals and organizations.

Influential Individuals in the Field of Nepal's Child Goddess, 'Kumari'

Several influential individuals have contributed to the field of Nepal's child goddess 'Kumari,' both in upholding the tradition and advocating for its reform. One such figure is the Rajguru, the chief priest responsible for the selection and rituals of the Kumari. The Rajguru holds significant power and authority in the Kumari tradition, and his role is instrumental in maintaining the sanctity and authenticity of the Kumari's divine status. He is responsible for overseeing the selection process, conducting rituals, and interpreting the signs and behaviors of the Kumari.

Another influential figure in the field of the Kumari tradition is the President of Nepal, who plays a crucial role in endorsing and supporting the Kumari tradition. The president's participation in the Kumari's annual chariot procession and other religious events reaffirms the government's commitment to preserving and promoting Nepal's cultural heritage. Additionally, the president has the authority to address the concerns and issues related to the Kumari tradition and to introduce reforms that ensure the well-being and rights of the Kumari.

On the other side, activists and human rights advocates have also emerged as influential figures in the field of the Kumari tradition. They have raised awareness about the potential harms and exploitation faced by the Kumari and have campaigned for reforms to protect her rights and well-being. These individuals have been instrumental in advocating for the education and empowerment of the Kumari, as well as for the introduction of guidelines and regulations to safeguard her physical and mental health.

Perspectives on Nepal's Child Goddess, 'Kumari'

The tradition of Nepal's child goddess 'Kumari' is a complex and multifaceted phenomenon, and it elicits a wide range of perspectives and opinions. Proponents of the Kumari tradition emphasize its deep-rooted cultural and religious significance and its role in preserving Nepal's heritage. They argue that the Kumari symbolizes divine feminine energy and the country's spiritual and cultural identity, and her presence is vital for the well-being and prosperity of the community. They believe that the rigorous selection process and the strict rituals associated with the Kumari are necessary to maintain the sanctity and purity of her divine status.

However, critics of the Kumari tradition raise legitimate concerns about the welfare and rights of the Kumari. They highlight the potential physical and psychological harm that the young girl may face due to her seclusion and the intense pressure of her role. They also point out the commercialization and exploitation of Kumari for tourism and entertainment purposes, which can undermine her dignity and well-being. Critics advocate for reforms to ensure the education, health, and development of the Kumari, as well as the protection of her rights as a child.

Well-Reasoned Analysis of Nepal's Child Goddess 'Kumari'

In analyzing the various perspectives on Nepal's child goddess, 'Kumari,' it is essential to consider the cultural, religious, and ethical dimensions of the tradition. On one hand, the Kumari tradition is deeply ingrained in the religious and cultural fabric of Nepal, and it holds significant value for the communities that revere and worship the living goddess. The tradition has been passed down through generations and has become an integral part of Nepal's identity, representing the country's spiritual and mythological beliefs.

However, the Kumari tradition also raises important ethical and human rights considerations. The selection process and the seclusion of the Kumari from normal life may compromise her rights to freedom, education, and healthy development. The intense scrutiny and pressure placed on the Kumari can have adverse effects on her physical and mental well-being, and her role as a divine figure should not come at the cost of her basic rights as a child. It is imperative to address these concerns and to ensure that the Kumari is protected and supported in a holistic and ethical manner.

Future Developments and Conclusion

Looking to the future, the Kumari tradition is likely to undergo significant changes and reforms to address the ethical and human rights issues associated with the practice. It is essential for the government, religious authorities, and civil society to collaborate in safeguarding the welfare and rights of the Kumari while preserving the cultural and religious significance of the tradition. Reforms may include the introduction of guidelines to ensure the education, health, and overall well-being of the Kumari, as well as measures to prevent her exploitation and commercialization.

In conclusion, Nepal's child goddess 'Kumari' is a unique and complex tradition that holds deep religious, cultural, and historical roots. The Kumari's influence extends beyond the spiritual realm and plays a crucial role in the social and cultural life of Nepal. However, it is essential to consider the ethical considerations and human rights implications associated with the tradition and to address them through collaborative efforts and reforms. Ultimately, the Kumari tradition should evolve in a way that upholds the dignity and well-being of the young girl while preserving the values and beliefs that it represents for Nepal.

THE ART OF BEING YOURSELF

In a world that is often bound by constraints and expectations, artistic freedom emerges as a beacon of liberation, a canvas on which the vibrant strokes of creativity paint the essence of true emancipation.

Artistic freedom is not merely the absence of restrictions; it is the boundless playground where imagination knows no borders. It is the manifestation of human expression in its purest and most authentic form, unburdened by societal norms or the chains of conformity.

As we dive into the realm of artistic freedom, we find that it is not just a privilege; it is a fundamental right—a right to explore the depths of our creativity, challenge the status quo, and, most importantly, to be unapologetically ourselves.

Artistic freedom allows us to question, provoke, and dissent. It is the cornerstone of innovation and progress, as it encourages the pursuit of unconventional ideas and uncharted territories. In this space of boundless creativity, artists become the torch-bearers of change, challenging the established order and shaping a world where diversity is not only accepted but celebrated.

Think of the bold strokes of a painter unafraid to challenge the conventional colour palette or the rebellious lyrics of a songwriter who uses music as a medium to question the prevailing social narrative. Consider the daring choreography of a dancer pushing the boundaries of movement, or the avant-garde filmmaker who transforms the mundane into the extraordinary. These artists embody the spirit of artistic freedom, refusing to be confined by the limitations imposed by society.

However, with great freedom comes great responsibility. Artists bear the weight of influencing the collective consciousness, and it is their duty to use this freedom judiciously—to inspire, to provoke thought, and to foster understanding. Artistic freedom is not a licence for chaos but a tool for enlightenment.

In conclusion, let us cherish and protect "The Art of Being Free." Let us recognize its transformative power and the profound impact it has on shaping our individual and collective identities. As we revel in the boundless realms of artistic expression, let us remember that true freedom is not just a state of being; it is a continuous journey—one that requires courage, creativity, and an unwavering commitment to authenticity.

RISING FROM ASHES

In the depths of despair, where shadows reside,
Where dreams once vibrant, now shattered inside,
There lies a wisdom, hidden from view,
A lesson to learn, from failures we accrue.

For failure, my friend, is not a dead end,
But a humble teacher, a faithful friend,
It whispers truths, in a voice so kind,
Guiding us forward, in the recesses of our mind.

From failure, we learn the art of resilience,
To rise from the ashes, with newfound brilliance,
To gather our strength, in the face of defeat,
And muster the courage, to stand on our feet.

Failure unveils the depths of our soul,
Unearths our weaknesses, makes us whole,
It humbles the mighty, it tests the strong,
And shows us the path, where we truly belong.

Igniting paths where boundless passion flows.
The journey arduous, yet courage finds its way,
Ambitions sculpt the dawn of a new day.

From whispered wishes to the grandest schemes,
Ambitions fuel the soul's relentless dreams.
They dance with stars in the vast cosmic sea,
Guiding seekers to a destiny yet to be.

So let ambition's fire forever burn,
A beacon bright, for every soul to yearn.

MY LOVE FOR BULLETS!

"Work hard with silence. Let your 'bullet' make all the noise!"

One thing I fancied about being the youngest in my generation was having brothers who were all adults and, more importantly, the fact that they all had a driving licence. The first person ever to impress me with his driving skills was none other than my dad.

My love for driving and travelling was set in motion when I went to my hometown in India after the pandemic.

Going out to visit our distant relatives strengthened my ties with my cousins, whom I was awkward with at first. But then, as they drove our family from one place to another, back and forth, I started enjoying their 'driving', and went out more often with them.

Very soon, I contemplated embarking on a journey astride a motorcycle, specifically, a Royal Enfield Bullet.

On my first ride on a bullet after the pandemic, I reminisced that when I was younger, I used to take rides on the motorcycles of every person who had visited our home. And then started my addiction to bullets. Irrespective of when or where I saw a bullet I wished to go on a drive.

Royal Enfield has always provided me a retro feel. It brings forth an overwhelming abundance of happiness, and the combination of speed, the dusty Indian air and whatnot, makes me tear up. But all that can be ignored, for the sake of going on a bullet.

MY LOVE FOR BULLETS!

Ever since then, I have loved watching videos of bike lovers and their happiness while being on one; I now share a bond with them. My love for bullets has also ignited a new passion in me; which is to master the art of riding a Royal Enfield and get a driving licence for a diverse variety of vehicles. Because now, that is something I find really trendy and sleek.
"I was born in a middle-class family, but my Enfield made me Royal."

BENEATH THE MOONLIT VEIL

In shadows deep, where moonlight wanes, A haunting tale, the heart constrains. Whispers crawl through midnight air, A spectral dance, a dark affair.

Through twisted trees, the wind does moan, A chilling symphony, all alone. Footsteps echo in the dead of night, A phantom's presence, pure fright.

Beneath the shroud of ghostly mist, A specter's gaze, by fear is kissed. Eyes that pierce the blackest gloom, A graveyard's hush, a haunted tomb.

Creaking floors in halls unseen, Echoes of what's never been. A ghastly visage, pale and cold, A story of the past retold.

Hollow sighs and eerie cries, A chorus born of long-lost ties. The walls, they weep, with secrets deep, A realm where restless spirits creep.

In mirrors dim, reflections lie, A soul entangled, cannot fly. Shivers race down every spine, As moonlit phantoms intertwine.

A phantom hand that chills the bone, In the realm where shadows roam. Whispers weave a tale untold, In the graveyard of the restless souls.

So hush now, hear the midnight wail, A ghostly presence, a spectral tale. In the realm of fear, where shadows sprawl.
